

Every child
deserves a safe
and happy home.

Canada's child welfare system is in crisis.

Unmanageable caseloads, excessive paperwork and staff turnover impact Social Worker practices and their ability to be effective and present in the field.

75%

of social workers report unmanageable workload as a critical issue in their practice of social workers that left the field did so due to stress or vicarious trauma

45%

72%

stated administrative responsibilities prevent them from spending adequate time with clients

*The Canadian Association of Social Workers (CASW) published a study in 2018. More than 3200 Workers and Child Welfare leaders were interviewed nationwide.

We are here to alleviate some of the pressure of growing caseloads, help advocate for a Child Welfare system that supports families to stay intact and help provide nurturing assistance through difficult situations and limited agency funding. Alo is designed to address systemic issues that contribute to the overrepresentation of Indigenous and African Canadian children in care.

Issues that make children from these communities at significantly higher risk for losing ties with family, identity and culture, youth suicide, unsuccessful reunification outcomes and the growing number of children aging out of the system. This is also true for LGBTQ+ people in care. Measures must be taken to ensure that the placement is open and supportive to their needs and the additional challenges that they can face.

We provide meaningful,
helpful tools.
